Lutheran Church of the Ascension—Savannah, Georgia

We are very proud to inform you of our work at the historic Lutheran Church of the Ascension in Savannah, Georgia. This pipe organ was built in 1983 by the Casavant organ company and contained some 50 ranks of pipes over three manuals. In 2003, the church entered into contract with a firm from Charleston, South Carolina to extensively rebuild the organ with a new console and many digital stops.

Unfortunately, the contracted firm has been unable to complete this project. Upon our inspection, we found many chests left in a non-functional state, with pipes strewn about.

We were honored to have been selected by the church to begin to return this pipe organ to its previous condition.

During our recent work we reinstalled all of the façade components and pipes to both prevent further damage to these pipes and to return the visual beauty of the pipe organ to the sanctuary.

We are delighted to work with this church to help them find an appropriate route for returning this pipe organ to its original condition.

Welcome new clients!

It was a pleasure during this last Christmas season to welcome new churches and musicians to the Coulter-Organbuilder family. These organs and their congregations will now enjoy the same high level of service that currently enjoyed by nearly 50 organs and institutions throughout the Southeastern United States!

We look forward to working with these musicians and their fine pipe organs to help ensure the highest level of music for their congregations.

Converse College - Spartanburg, South Carolina

In the fall of 2008, we were pleased to have been contracted by Converse College to return the larger of the Holtkamp organs to functioning status. The instrument is a wonderful teaching and practice instrument with electric action and is seven ranks over two manuals.

Upon our first inspection, we found this instrument to be in overall fine condition. There were a number of failed pneumatics that related to the control of the stops. We were able to recover some of these pneumatics during our most recent service visit to the college and will complete a playing restoration of this instrument in early 2009.

With a rapidly growing organ program, we are honored to be able to assist the college in the care of the four fine pipe organs on their campus.
